[COMMUNICATED. MOTHER'S BELL VS. CURFEW BELL.

In the Atlanta Journal a few days ago my attention was attracted by flaming headlines, the city police warning mothere about allowing nurses to carry their little children into dens of infamy and pollution that were not only poisonouto the mental and spiritual makeup of the child, but ruincus to its health. The question of a curfew bell was discussed, pro and con, in Atlanta two years ago. I think a mother's bell is needed more. If there was no need of this caution to mothers there would be no need of a "boys reformatory.' The no need of a "boye reformatory." The idea of a necessity arising in a city of churches and Christia city for a boye'reformatory! Sound the alarm! Take this instance: It is a hot sultry day in August. The mother goes to her private boudoir, done a dainty Mother Hutbard, takes up the last novel and sinks into oblivion. Lettle pattering feet come to her door, a tiny fist pommels the to ber door, a tiny fist pommels the door for admission. A cross voice calls from within: "Go away baby, tell nurse to put on your pretty new cap and take you to ride to your carriage." The baby runs away delignted. The nurs dresses him up and then riss herself and starts. It is the very hottest t me of the day; the sickening sun pour down on the baby's brain, he become stupis, is overcome by the heat. His dear little head begins to nod. The nurse is so busy talking to ber beau she does not notice the child. Finally, in turning a corner, the little fellow falls turning a corner, the little fellow falls headlong on the curbing. (My husband saw this happen while we were living in Atlanta.) Ring the mother's bell! I heard a child in a nurse's arms screaming one day. I concealed myself in my y-rd and distinctly heard the slaps sharp and quick. The baby was slaps, sharp and quick. The baby was sobbing, trying to hush, and the nume commanding it to "aush or I'll kil you." Ring the mother's bell! The idea of a baby being given into the care of an ignorant, careless nurse not only all day, but nearly all night! God pity the coild who has to lisp his evening prayer at the knee of an ignorant servent, and his mother in the ballroom waltzing away her God-given opportunity in the arms of another wo-man's husband! Ring the mother's

In one of our Georgia towns I saw a young mother just at dusk bastening along the street with her baby, not a year old—her first borr. I could not bluk where she could be going at that hour, and asked a friend what she thought of it. "On," said she, "she is going to carry the baby to a negro we-man in the lower end of the town. She is going to give a dance tonight."
Ring the mother's bel!! I think there is a mother's circle or society of some kind in Atlanta. What more important subject could attract their attention?Can't something be done to save our babies and cur larger children? The public schools need our attention, but ob, how much more attention homes need! Oh mothers, it will be worth more to hear the Lord say "Well done" than to have your names and pictures constituous as leaders of so-ciety. It is an awful thought that things have come to such a pass that our ci y police have had cause to warn mothers about their negligence concerning their children. Ring the mother's bell! God help us.- [Claude Dimon, in Wesleyan Christian Advo-
